

Parallel exists between terrorism, abortion

Re: "Group parades self-righteousness," The Nugget, Oct. 10.

It's interesting that Catherine Levesque mentioned the New York terrorist attack in her letter about people showing the visual truth of abortion to young adults. There is a parallel between the terrorism and abortion, but not in the way she uses it.

The horror of the terrorism is that a few people chose to kill thousands of innocent, helpless people who had no chance to escape or even protect themselves. They were murdered because of where they were, in targeted airplanes and buildings.

No reasons justify the killing even if members of the Taliban are celebrating the action. This is exactly what abortion is, powerful people making the choice to kill helpless human beings, because of where they are — in their mother's womb. No reasons justify the killing of babies, even if some people say it is a "woman's choice."

Catherine is angry at the people who show the truth of abortion. Is she angry at the news media for repeatedly showing the New York horror? It would be better if she directed her anger toward those who commit terrorist attacks on all people, born and unborn.
